R NAWAY APPREHENDED.—Was committed to the Jail of Reinfax County, Virginia, on the 28th day of September, 1849.

a benjat Mulatto Man. (who was committed under the name of Job-Woodson, but whose proper name is ALFRED.) ALFRED was reseed in this county by Mr. John W. Ashton, and sold by Mr. Thos. J. Mundy to Cravin & Haywood Pool, who carried him to Brorgia, and from thence, Alfred says, he was carried to Missispipi and self to the President and Directors of the Brandon Baok Company; and when that Institution failed, he was smuggled off to New Orleans to prevent being sold for the debts of the Bank. Alfred says he made his escape from N. Orleans to Liverpool by an English vessel; and from thence he went to Canada, and then made his way to Virginia. Alfred has made so many contradictory statements, I know not which is most correct. He first said he belonged to a Mr. John Moss, Commission Merchant of N. Orleans. Alfred is about 5 feet 10 inches help, about 25 years old, high check bones, and has a sear on his right hand or wrist, between the thumb and wrist joint. There is no doubt of his travelling with Free Papers heretofore. The awares are rewrist, between the thumb and wrist joint. There is no doubt of his travelling with Free Papers heretofore. The owners are requested to prove their property, pay the reward and expenses, or he will be sold out for his jail-fees at the expiration of 13 months from the commitment.

temporary deficiency in the Treasury has been the effect of over-action and excessive dealings by the com THE CURRENCY-BANK OF THE UNITED STATES. The following is the interesting Paper which accommunity, through the agency of inordinate banking, anies the Address of the Charlottesville Convention: both in the United States and in Great Britain: Had Mr. Webster the patience to await the operation of the Money being used as the measure of value between Independent Treasury, he would probably find that as the country recovers from "debility" produced by exexchangeable commodities, it is deemed essential, in all well-regulated Governments, to keep it and its representative steady and uniform. As in the case of weights cess, it will feel all the enjoyments of renovated strength from that simple and salutary remedy. With our dear-bought experience, we shall avoid, for a time at least, and measures, it would be inconvenient, and even im practicable, for the community to calculate accurately, the pleasures of over-indulgence, and with the aid of n their dealings with one another, the value of what a bountiful Providence, soon be restored to perfect they sell or buy, without some fixed standard. The health. While the country is recovering her natural ngress of the United States, as was their duty, have fixed the relative values of gold and silver; and the paper currency should at all times be made to conrable, without a change of treatment, and a change of doctors too. When Harrison and Webster shall form to the standard of those metals. When, from form to the standard of those metals. When, one of doctors too. When Harrison and Websel and untoward circumstances, the paper currency becomes depreciated, by becoming inconvertible, the producer, the merebant, and the consumer, who have grand nostrum—a National Bank—a bank of fifty millions capital—made up chiefly of State bonds owned lions capital—made up chiefly of State bonds owned their separate employments to occupy their time and attention, cannot be informed of the various fluctuabroad, and of foreign money—chartered for fifty years, or, in effect, in perpetuity; a bank to wield the money ations which daily occur, and they must consequently of the people, as well as of the stockholders-with a high tariff to fill and keep full its coffers, and an inflube subject to great inconvenience, and often to positive loss; and the dealers in money and exchanges, whose business it is to understand this matter, are the only persons who profit by the inequalities in the estimated ence in war and in peace, such as the Rothschilds are said to have over some of the Governments of Europe. No distributions of surplus among the States will there. value of the circulating medium. No matter what may be the depreciation of Bank notes or other paper currency from the specie standard, it would be of little imbe best of but a great central moneyed power will be established in the great central moneyed power will be around it all the products of the labor and soil or the portance, if it were fixed and permanent; because prices would conform to the degree of that depreci-South; which will give omnipotent power to the Government when it acts with it, or paralyze it when in oppoposition; which may foster such State banks as beation, as in the case of a debasement of the coins: but against a fluctuating and variable currency, no prucome its satellites, or crush those which act with indence or precaution can guard. According to the State Rights doctrine, the remedy for the evil is, that the sedependence; which may expand and contract the circulating medium as may best suit its cupidity, without regard to the interest of the community. And it is gravely and confidently proposed that this machine of gold and silver, by its immediate convertibility into coin; and until that is done and permanently and universally established, it is unreasonable to expect the Federal Government to forfeit its credit by receiving the public dues in any other than the legal courteney, which it is bound to may over to the public. the Federal Government to forfeit its credit by receiving the public dues in any other than the legal currency, which it is bound to pay over to the public the States the power and authority to regulate their the States the power and authority to regulate their the Federal Government has no authority, under the limitations of the Constitution, to grant charters or limitations of the Constitution, to grant charters or ever medium they may mutually agree on. Webster, who seems to have taken the currency of the subject us to the manufacturing interest of the East, and when we are just about to shake off these shaceman leaves the impress of talent and ingenuity on every thing that cmanates from his great mind. As a dialectician he is not surpassed by any of his contemporaries. tician he is not surpassed by any of his contemporaries constitution is to be violated on the plea of expediency, either at home or abroad. He can take either side of a by granting corporations, let Congress authorize at least three independent banks in preference to one great monopoly with different branches. Let us not b sacrificed. One in the North, one in the West, and one in the South, all under the same regulations, will he was a member of the House of Representatives, from the city of Boston. It abounded in the soundest max-ims of political economy, and when he was translated in the city of Boston. It abounded in the soundest max-ims of political economy, and when he was translated to the Senate, he took the opposite side of that question.
Whatever may have been the motive of his converthe country; and what will be of still more consequence, sion, his ability as a debater was equally conspicuous in will serve to keep each other in check.

President Van Buren is no enemy to the prudent use of paper credit, and a well-regulated system of State Party predilections and prejudices produce wonders, banks; but as a patriot and a statesman, he has portrayas is fully exemplified by the political movements of the times, and probably no one feels their influence which leads to a dangerous bloated currency, and a demore strongly than Mr. Webster. Nurtured and steeped in the old Federal doctrines of the straitest sect, a the fiscal concerns of the General Government shall partizan of the Essex Junto and of the Hartford Convention, he has adhered to them with a pertinacity not of banks over which Congress have no control; and to to be exceeded. Attached to a concentration of power avoid that evil, he proposes a dissolution of the connecin a moment of alarm about the derangement of the currency in 1816, yielded to his advisers and abandoned his own unanswerable arguments against the constitutionality of such a corporation, so strong was the hostility of Mr. Webster to the then administration, that he actually opposed the establishment of a Bank, that he actually opposed the establishment of a Bank, and, for the time, became a hard money man as to the revenue, according to the true reading of the Constitution of any State which allows a depreciated currency, like tion; and now, as an offset to Mr. Van Buren's recom- individuals in bad credit, pay more for what they buy, mendation, he lauds Mr. Madison for the only weak and receive less for what they sell in the proportion of act of his political life.

This gentleman is the Atlas who is to bear on his plied, and the controversy be at an end. This gentleman is the Atlas who is to bear on his shoulders "the Hero of North Bend" from his seat on The abuses on the part of the great contractors, to the banks of the Ohio to the Presidential chair on the which Mr. Webster refers, are grossly exaggerated by banks of the Potomac; and then, doubtless, as a re-ward for his labors, is to be made General Harrison's lic contracts, that they are to be paid in good money, Prime Minister. Yet some of the Whigs of Virginia and the rates at which they are taken are proportion are extremely sensitive and even get angry when it is intimated that their candidate is a Federalist. It requires no great prophet to foretell what will be the course of the new Administration under such austices they have been raised way; but such laborers as are intelligent and provident way; but such laborers as are intelligent and provident by the active political leaders of the Opposition, drive the people to seek for safety under their protection.

It will realize the fable of the sheep and the wolves.

will realize the fable of the sheep and the wolves.

Mr. Webster, in his Saratoga speech, says: "There are those who think these vast popular meetings are got up by effort; but I say that no effort can get them up and no effort can keep them down." Why, then, are such wondrous exertions used to get them up by the leaders of the party? By whom are they planned and prepared? Who traverses different States to attend and harangue at these meetings? With whom did the convention at Harrisburg originate? The great meetconvention at Harrisburg originate? The great meet-ings at Baltimore, at Nashville, and other places, with the real wages depend on supply and demand. Labor ings at Baltimore, at Nashville, and other places, with all their processions, pomp, parade, and pageantry, and lavish expenditure of money in feasts, flags, emblems, mottoes, and badges? Were all these the mere spontaneous risings of the people? Mr. Webster may say so, but does he believe it?

After a fine figure about the human system, the blood, the head, the heart, the hand, and all the members—about paralysis, numbness, and death, he says the main cause of the disasters of the times "is the disordered state of the Treasury." Has not the orator mistaken the effect for the cause? How stands the case in reality? After the payment of the public debt under the administration of General Jackson, the Treasury was overflowing, and to prevent a waste of public. sury was overflowing, and to prevent a waste of public else, instead of leaving these things to the natural money on useless objects, thirty millions of surplus were operations of trade, and his great lever is a Nationdistributed among the States, of which no part has been al Bank. But what is still more remarkable is, that repaid. The failure of some of the banks to pay their the banking interest generally is in favor of such an establishment. The State Banks, like the frogs in the debts to the Government—the inability of many of the importing merchants to discharge their bonds—the great reduction in the receipts from imposts—the diminished sales of the public lands—these combined causes crippled the Treasury, and rendered it necessary to resort to the credit of the U. S. to enable the Government to carry on the ordinary operations and the supplied that when the stork comes, their very existence is manger. The great desideratum, however, is the public money to give a National Bank the requisite power lie money to give a National Bank the requisite power with great desideratum. Under these circumstances, President Van Buren very properly convened Congress to provide the ways and means to conduct the operations of the Government. In his first message he detailed all the circumstances, and proposed an emission of Treasury notes to meet the deficiency of the revenue; and foresceing the danger of collecting the public dues through the agency of the Banks, whose paper began to depreciate from the moment of suspension, he committed the unpardonable sin of recommend.
